

Do you dare go on a Halloween quest?
Just solve each clue and do your best.
Don't be scared, the first one isn't hard.
You put these on before going in the yard.

I'm not a monster,
witch or ghost.
I cook breakfast
like bagels and toast.

For spooky snacks or monster treats,
you'll need some tools
to eat these sweets.
The drawer where spoons
and knives all rest
holds what you need to continue this quest.

When morning comes
at the break of dawn.
Ghosts are groggy, and witches yawn.
Think of a brew that's dark and hot.
Then, find your clue
where it's cooked a lot.

When monsters want to splish and splash,
they dive right in with a bubbly dash.
Rubber ducks also come here to play.
Now find your clue without delay.

When midnight strikes and witches fly,
I keep the time as hours go by.
With hands that move but never walk,
find your clue where I tick and talk.

After tricks and treats and spooky fun,
the costumes come off
when the day is done.
They are dropped in a basket
without much care.
Your next clue is patiently waiting there.

Mummies love to wrap up tight
in something that is soft and white.
It's on a roll, not far from view.
The bathroom is where you'll find this clue.

Faces stare, both old and new.
Some may even be watching you.
They sit in frames hung on the wall.
To find your clue, go check them all.

Witches, ghosts, and goblins dwell here,
in the stories you love to hear.
Find the shelf where these stories stay,
and a hidden clue that's tucked away.

After munching on candy all night long,
keep your teeth looking healthy and strong.
Near the brush that keeps them white,
your next clue awaits, not out of sight.

A monster looked & screamed, "OH NO!"
Turns out it saw its own shadow.
Stand and stare, don't run away.
Your next clue is where reflections stay.

Round and orange, plump and bright,
a glowing face that lights the night.
Near this gourd, your clue does stay,
just waiting to be found by you today.

To welcome ghosts both big and small,
you open this to greet them all.
The clue is near where doorbells ding.
Look around where hinges swing.

A Halloween party requires a feast,
with chilling treats for every beast.
To find your clue, don't be shy.
Open the door where cold things lie.

You made it to the final clue.
Witches are cackling just for you.
Beneath the covers, soft and deep,
your prize awaits,
where you drift off to sleep.
